PERTINENT FACTS CONCERNING WATERWORKS

AND REASONS WHY THE TOWN SHOULD PURCHASE THE PLANT.

The physical assets of the Napanee Waterworks Co. are as follows:

3500 ft. of 10 inch cast iron pipe.

1400 ft. of 8 inch cast iron pipe.

12000 ft. of 6 inch cast iron pipe.

1300 ft. of 4 inch cast iron pipe.

5300 ft. of 2 inch wrought iron pipe.

Also 42 hydrants and necessary gate valves. In addition to the street mains there are 450 private services, and a 125,000 gallon stand pipe. In the pump house, which is on rented property, there is a steam plant and two pumps, one driven by steam, and the other driven by water wheels. The mains have been carefully examined at different places through out the town and have been found practically in as perfect a condition as when they were put down.

Will it pay?

1. Experience has shown that in other towns of Ontario with a similar population, municipally owned waterworks pay well, even when first installed.

In Napanee we have 450 customers to start with, together with certain industries and railroads taking considerable water, and the system is on a splendid paying basis now as the following statement will show:

Income for year ending May 31, 1920		$11,300.53
Increased income since then from the following sources
From new household users...	$250.00
From G.T.R. increase	350.00
From new industries	750.00	$1350.00
Total increase paid..		$12,650.53
Expenditures for year ending May 31, 1920.....
Insurance	$116.02
School taxes.....	495.87
Rent paid Pictou 600.00
Commission	12.00
Salaries and supplies	2786.94	4010.83
Operation profit.....		$8,639.70

2. In your water rates you have already paid for the plant twice over, and still do not own it.

3. The saving to the municipality in the next twenty years will more than pay the entire cost of the plant.

4. You have a system of pipes already provided.

5. If the plant had been purchased twenty years ago, it would have been all paid for now and your water rates could have been materially reduced.

6. The revenue will more than cover the cost each year, and there will absolutely be no charge in the taxes except that which has already been charged for fire protection.

7. The purchase price agreed on is $70,000 and the engineering firm that made a thorough examination of the plant for the town, estimates the present value as $94,000.

HOW IS IT PROPOSED TO OPERATE THE PLANT?

The date agreed upon for taking over the waterworks is November 1st, 1920. For the month's balance of this year, a special committee appointed by the Town Council will oversee it, at the January elections a Public Utilities Commission will be elected by the people to take complete control.

Let us not be the last town to own and control our own waterworks. We are now one of the very few who do not own and operate their plant. Come out on Monday, October 4th, and vote "for" the by-law.

WHY BUY THE CANAL AND ADJOINING PROPERTY?

1. The property produces a revenue of 10 per cent. on the investment.

2. The Hydro Electric Power Commission were anxious to get rid of all property outside of their regular electric light plant. For the town to allow the water power of the canal to fall into other hands would be a mistake.

3. It places in the hands of the town one of the most beautiful sites for a park that could be imagined. Adjoining the falls on the south east side of the river is a natural park already with beautiful trees on it, and a natural spring of the purest drinking water. It can be made a resort for family picnic parties that will be a great boon to our citizens.

4. It gives the municipality valuable sites for small industries.

5. It places all the water power of the river at Napanee in the control of the municipality.

6. The canal furnishes water to run the pumps practically ten months in the year.

7. It would be a serious mistake indeed to purchase the waterworks plant, without also purchasing the canal and water supply as the very low cost of operating our waterworks depends solely on the town having control of this property.

8. The present revenue will pay the interest and principal on the debentures and leave a surplus of over $400 each year, and the probability is that other tenants can be located which will increase the revenue. Be sufficiently interested in your own town to come out and vote for the by-law on October 4th.

The council is very anxious that the ratepayers should know all the facts in connection with the purchase of the waterworks and of the canal property, and for this purpose there will be a public meeting called for Monday, Sept. 27th, at 7.30 p.m. in the Fair hall, when an opportunity will be given to ask questions and discuss the projects. A full statement will be given.

LENNOX COUNTY FAIR

Three Days of Splendid Amusement And Educational Features

Lennox County Fair was opened on Tuesday afternoon by Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture in the Ontario Government, who gave a most interesting and timely address touching on the advantages which every farmer may receive in exhibiting at and attending Fall Fairs and other subjects of interest to rural dwellers. A splendid attendance enthusiastically applauded his remarks.

The beautiful grounds of the Driving Park never looked better than this week and the many improvements made to the buildings and grounds all assisted in making the second new county fair a splendid success.

The Exhibition was particularly favored by having ideal weather conditions and the attendance on all three days was very large. The first days' attendance was a revelation to those who have supposed the first day was only a day of preparation. The directors of the Napanee Fair aimed to give three days well balanced programmes and the programme furnished on the first day was unusually good.

First day was children's day, and all public school children of the county who formed in procession in front of the West Ward school building and marched to the park were admitted free. The children formed a procession over a quarter of a mile long.

The main building was very attractively arranged, several very improving changes in arrangement having been made since last year.

The various booths occupied by the merchants were very attractively arranged and decorated. The booths were occupied by The Graham Co., with an attractively displayed selection of the season's styles in men's clothing. Messrs. Davy & Allison specializing in Happy Thought and Peninsular stoves and ranges. The Hydro Electric Shop had a splendid showing of electrical household helps and lighting fixtures.

The Wilson Shoe Store's exhibit of seasonable footwear for the family received favorable comment, as also did the many excellent samples of grips and trunks. Messrs. Weiss Bros also had an attractive display of boots and shoes and travelling goods showing samples of the various lines of goods carried by this firm.

The Gibbard Furniture Company had a very attractive booth, displaying a few of the many splendid lines of furniture on view at the retail store in town. Gibbard Furniture Company, who also handle the well-known "His Master's Voice" phonographs and records.

Mr. W. D. Midmer had an interesting exhibit of woodwork interior finish, as well as roofing etc. The Daly Tea Company had on display an exhibit showing the excellent manner in which the Daly Teas and Coffee are packed, assuring the purchasers that all the justly celebrated Daly Teas will come to them in the best of condition.

The Robinson Co., Napanee's largest store, had a smart exhibit which showed to marked advantage some choice specimens of the beautiful fur goods being shown by The Robinson Co. this season. The exhibit was many admirers among the fair sex.

Harry L. VanLuven supplied the piano for the concert given in the palace, and besides pianos showed a very fine line of phonographs.

The J. J. Haines Shoe Houses had a large display of footwear and travelling goods which gave but a general idea of the attractive stock carried by this firm in their Napanee branch.

Very much admired indeed was the display of ladies' work, fruit, flowers and canned fruit in the centre of the main building. In fruit especially the exhibits were very much ahead of last year.

The vegetables were shown in a large tent, and the special attraction seemed to be the unusual number and quality of the potatoes exhibited.

The exhibit of cattle and horses was hardly as large as it should be, and there was room to spare in the immense live stock building.

Sheep, hogs and poultry were all good exhibits both in quantity and quality.

On the evening of the First Day the baby show attracted a large audience, and a dinner lot of babies would be hard to get together. Mr. W. S. Herrington, K. C., was master of ceremonies, and introduced the three nurses from Kingston who judged the babies. Mrs. Bradley also assisted in the evening's entertainment.

Following are the awards:

BABY SHOW

Best baby boy, three months to one year—McGillivray McMath, Marysville; Joseph Reid, Sills-ville.

Best baby boy, one year to eighteen months—Clayton Kirkpatrick, Napanee; James Miller, Napanee.

Best baby girl, three months to one year—Josephine Hicks, Napanee; Minnie Norris, Napanee.

Best baby exhibited, either boy or girl—McGillivray McMath.

The management of the Fair were fortunate in securing the Havanna Red Sox baseball club for the three days of the Fair. In addition to giving splendid exhibitions of ball playing they assisted in the programme the first evening.

The game the first day was between the Red Sox and the Triple Links, of Kingston, and resulted in the Red Sox winning by a score of 6-4.

The second day the Verona team put up a good game, but the score favored the Red Sox 8-6.

The second evening an enjoyable concert was given in the palace by Messrs. Neal and Bennett, of Toronto, assisted by Mrs. Bradley, Napanee, and Mr. Barrett, of Belleville.

THE CADET DRILL COMPETITION

Four corps of Cadets competed for the silver trophy, Napanee, Picton, Belleville, and Kingston. The cup was won for the second time by Napanee, and becomes the property of same.

ITALIAN LABOR IS SANE

Refuses to be Stampeded by Radicals.

Workmen Decided by Large Majority That They Will Not Seize All the Industries In Italy, But Mills Taken Over by Metal Workers Are To Be Retained as an Experiment.

MILAN, Italy, Sept. 14.—By a vote of 600,000 to 400,000, Italian labor on Sunday decided against an immediate revolution throughout Italy.

The vote was taken at the session of the Confederation of Labor here, after continuous debate for sixteen hours.

The mills, plants and factories that have been seized by the metal workers will be held, however, as an experiment.

Negotiations with the employers for worker representation on the boards of directors which control industries will be entered into at the beginning of the week. It is likely that these negotiations will continue for several weeks.

The decision not to carry out the seizures throughout Italy was carried, and it was ordered that all factories other than those in the metal trades be turned back to their employers. This, perhaps the greatest decision in modern economic war, was rendered against a background rich in history. The session at which speakers advanced the most aggressive of modern views that embraced the tendencies of labor all over the world, was held in a great room in a monastery that was erected before Columbus discovered America.

Telegraph, telephone and wireless connections were made in rooms that were built when a man thinking that the world was round was merely a harmless lunatic. The scores of nations that awaited the word of the conference were non-existent in the day that the meeting hall existed.

For a time the decision seemed to hang in the balance. The men of more radical tendencies favored the complete seizure. The most commanding voice in the decision rendered was that of Signor Duragona, the labor leader, who has recently returned from Russia. He told the delegates that he had come back from Russia fully convinced that Bolshevism cannot be made to flourish on Italian soil, and that the only real danger a revolution would bring would be an advantage to the workers themselves.

The Government has remained neutral. Soldiers, however, are being rushed into the city. They are coming in motor trucks, as the railroad workers have refused to haul trains carrying them or carrying munitions.

In the occupied metal plants the Red flags are flying. The workers do an eight-hour shift of work and then stand guard for four hours.

FRUIT CROPS DAMAGED.

Worst Storm in Years Visits Ontario and Quebec.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont.—The most severe wind and rainstorm that has ever visited the Niagara fruit belt swept over one portion of it on Saturday afternoon, causing total loss to some growers. The destruction took place in a narrow area of country, about five miles in length, about five miles in width, west of Port Weller along the south shore of Lake Ontario. As telephone connection between the fruit growers in that section is demoralized, the complete damage will not be known for at least two or three days.

About four o'clock on Saturday, two storms, one from the northeast and another from the southwest converged between Port Weller and the lake, causing a disturbance, the like of which has not yet been seen since the tornadoes of 1898 and 1902.

Almost complete darkness following the rushing mass to Chick the end of the world home. Then the end. The telephone poles were snapped off and orchards were completely dismantled, even the trunks of trees being left which a few moments before were full foliage branches bending under the weight of abnormal crops of fruit. Vineyards heavily laden with grapes on Saturday are to-day nothing but barren posts and wires with not even the vines stripped off. Corn fields in the path of the storm are stalks bereft of cobs and foliage, even the stalks in some instances being riddled with the lower portions of the stalks hang like ribbons. Melon patches were transferred into areas of garbage with the vines missing, while the crops of onions were torn out of the ground. The greatest damage appears to have been to peaches and grapes. Nearly all of the latter remaining uneut, while great quantities of late peaches had been unpicked.

As an example of the damage in the path of the storm, George Walker, of Grantham, estimates his loss at $40,000.

An idea of the severity of the storm over his farm can be gained by the fact that his portions were cut out of apples in his orchard.

W. S. Bunting, of Granham, also estimates his loss at about $10,000. Orchards all the way from Port Weller beyond Port Dalhousie are with few exceptions almost totally ruined.

Noise and Birds.

One thinks of birds as shy and delicate creatures easily frightened by a sudden sound. That's error. A bird is disturbed by noise only so long as the noise is associated with danger. The moment noise ceases to threaten them, birds seem to mind it not at all. The gentle, lisping phoebe chooses to nest under bridges across which wagons and trucks pass frequently with a deafening roar. If the bridge is under railroad tracks, where the racket is much greater, it's all one to phoebe. The gravel roof of some high office building in the noisy centre of the city is often the chosen nesting place of Mrs. Night Hawk. The creature more harried by nerves and noise is the one that makes the most noise of all. That's man!

Meighen Government Refused to Stay Order of Railway Board, But Promised Quick Hearing of All Appeals—Charges in the Dominion Compared With Those That Are Permitted In the United States.

OTTAWA, Sept. 14.—The Dominion Government, in an official statement handed out Sunday night, declines to grant a stay in the order of the Board of Railway Commissioners granting the Canadian railways the right of increasing their freight, passenger and parlor-car rates. The order goes into effect to-day. The statement points out that the decisions of the Railway Board may not be lightly interfered with, and that since the board has been in operation no judgment of the board has been set aside by the Governor-in-Council. The Government, however, recognizes the right of appeal and will facilitate in every way the early hearing of the appeals. The statement also sets forth: "If it should appear to be a case where the appeal should be allowed and the decision modified or reversed, there could, if deemed proper, be provision for rebates of rates charged beyond those ultimately fixed."

The Government statement, in part, follows:

"Telegrams have been received from different parts of the country protesting against the judgment of the Board of Railway Commissioners granting a general increase in railway rates, and requesting that the action of the board should first be suspended and further action be taken by the Government. Many of the wires received have been sent under misapprehension as to the position of the Board of Railway Commissioners and its action to the Government. The wires, indeed, would indicate that a belief exists which, if not prevalent, has at least obtained in certain parts of the country, that the Board of Railway Commissioners is merely a department of the Government service. This is not the case.

"In 1913 Parliament decided that the control of railway rates should be removed from direct departmental and political interference and provision was made for a Board of Railway Commissioners. The board was subsequently constituted and has since discharged the statutory and judicial functions assigned to it in a manner undoubtedly, on the whole, in the public interest and to the general acceptance of the people. It has not been interfered with by this or any other Government. Instead of being a mere Governmental department, the board is, by statute, declared a court, and has the rights, privileges and independence of a court. The act, however, provides for an appeal to the Governor-in-Council, and reserves the right of the Governor-in-Council on such appeals to vary or rescind any order, rule or decision of the board. The practice that has grown up under this rule is well settled. The decisions of the board cannot lightly be interfered with.

"The question of a stay of the board's judgment has been carefully considered at the most short time at the Government's disposal renders possible. The board's judgment goes into effect on Monday, the 13th instant. The Government has had before it the complete judgment of the Railway Commission embodying reference to the evidence and reasons for judgment. This has been carefully studied. As against this there have been no appeals, of course, could be presented, only brief conventions by way of protest. The judgment finds that the relief granted is necessary and should be granted, and that after the hearing of evidence and arguments on both sides. A suspension means more or less indefinite postponement, and if the judgment is right, would render impossible the remedying of any injustice done. The ordinary rule of the Railway Committee, which, it should be pointed out, is unanimous, being concurred in by all the commissioners who sat upon the case, further indicates that the objections now urged were taken into account, and emphasized that no injustice should be made. The official judgment of the United States Interstate Commerce Commission of the United States has, as well, been available for reference. The Government, it may be noted, is now in force. A perusal of this judgment discloses that more general, and, in many cases, heavier increases have been granted to railways in that country.

"Over and above this the increases in the Eastern territory are limited as to time in the manner as to which increases in Canada are. The general increases of 25 per cent. in Western territory and of 15 per cent. in Eastern territory allowed by the Canadian board are reduced, under the judgment, to 20 per cent. and 10 per cent. effective January 1 next, and, in addition, the railway companies are bound to submit monthly statements so that their earnings may be checked and reductions made in rates, in case the rates allowed proved unnecessarily high.

"It should also be noted that the increase in passenger rates is also limited. In the American territory the increase is 20 per cent.; in Canada the increase is 20 per cent., but in Canada the increase is to be reduced to 15 per cent. on July 1 next, and on July 1 next the increase is cancelled altogether. No limitations are made in the American order.

"The above references are necessary to be taken into account when the Government is asked to take responsibility for the confusion and possibly the injustice that may be done at this date by interfering with the judgment of the board pending its application. The whole subject can, however, be fully gone into on appeal."

Woman as City Clerk.

Miss Martha Dickinson, who for the past eighteen years has been employed in the office of the City Clerk in Windsor, and who for a large part of that time has discharged acceptably the duties of City Clerk Lusted, was recently by a practically unanimous vote of the council, appointed to succeed Mr. Lusted upon his retirement this year. The position carries with it a salary of $2,400 a year. It is believed Miss Dickinson will be the first woman in Canada ever named to a similar position. Ald. Wood alone opposed the appointment. Besides Miss Dickinson, there were six other applicants for the position.

STRIKERS STILL ALIVE.

Irishmen Last a Long Time Without Food.

LONDON, Sept. 14.—Terence MacSweney, Lord Mayor of Cork, was in a state of collapse and exhaustion Monday night at Brixton Prison. This is the thirty-second day of his fast. MacSweney passed a bad and restless night, according to a bulletin issued by the Irish Self-determination League.

Mrs. MacSweney, wife of the Lord Mayor of Cork, together with his sisters, Mary and Annie, and his brother Sean, have addressed an appeal to the United States Ambassador and the heads of other embassies and legations in London for submission to their Governments. It expressed the hope that the united councils of the nations addressed "will prevent the tragedy now pending and thereby turn the peoples of the world to joy."

Rumors that Irish hunger strikers in jail in Cork are being fed surreptitiously are denied in a despatch to the Daily Mail, which declares the only nourishment they are receiving is from oil with which they are rubbed to alleviate the pain they suffer due to wasting tissues. While the deaths of the more delicate hunger strikers may be expected at any time, the despatch says they may not succumb for several days.

The eleven hunger strikers in the Cork jail were still alive Monday night, but all of them were materially weaker. Two of the striking prisoners, Michael Burke and Kenny, collapsed during Sunday night, and their condition is causing especial anxiety. Sean Hennessy remains in a comatose state, and in some unconscious moments he is refusing to take the customary quantity of water. During the night he accepted about a pint. All of the strikers are becoming very restless, which, according to the doctors, is a new and dangerous symptom of their case.

It was learned on Monday that both the Government physicians, Dr. Pearson and Dr. Buttiscombe, had received death threats.

THE PICKFORD TRAGEDY.

Fixing the Blame of Olive Thomas' Death.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—An autopsy is to be held Monday to decide the exact cause of the death of Olive Thomas, the American motion picture actress. If the examining surgeons agree that she died from the effects of accidentally drinking mercury, a permit will be issued for her body to be shipped to the United States.

Jack Pickford, husband of the actress, has left Paris. He went to London in a plane, accompanied by Owen Moore, former husband of Mary Pickford. It is understood that Mr. Pickford will return here on Wednesday. The authorities are virtually satisfied that Miss Thomas did not intentionally commit suicide, but accidentally died. The next step is to decide finally whether the whole affair was an accident.

Mr. Pickford, in making a sworn statement, said he and his wife returned to their hotel, the Ritz, exceedingly weary from a night of celebration. They made a complete round of the gay Montmartre cafes, he said. Pickford had already gone to bed when he heard a cry for help, and hurried to the bathroom, found his wife there with a bottle of poison at her feet. She was unable to speak on account of her throat having been burned." Mr. Pickford said Miss Thomas was given antidotes, then hurried to the hospital, where she died in spite of all efforts to revive. "She did not want to die," he insisted.

DENOUNCE BOLSHEVISM.

Canadian Labor Opposed to Revolution.

WINDSOR, Sept. 14. — Denunciation of the "destructionists," the revolutionaries, who would set up a Soviet form of government in Canada, is the main feature of the 86 page report of the Executive Council of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, to that body, now in session at Windsor.

The "safe and sane" policy of the executive is summed up in the final paragraph of its long report.

"So long as human beings are created with different characteristics and live in different environments, differences of opinion will exist; but our work can only achieve the measure of success it is entitled to so long as we have the support of the majority of the toilers we represent, and an open mind to take into due consideration to other sections of the people of Canada. To do this it is necessary to exercise the greatest toleration of the views of others, and while guarding zealously our established organizations and conditions of labor, observe the same freedom of expression that we ourselves demand.

That is a fairly broad basis on which to found labor's case. The Executive Council, however, is not leaving it at that. It takes five pages to show up the evils of the destructive policy, and to point out some of the bitterest results of the destructionist propaganda.

Leap From Speeding Train.

GUELPH, Sept. 14.—The local police have received word that Raymond Moss, alias Albert Meihm, the young man who escaped as he was arrested here after breaking into Savage's jewelry store, broke custody while en route from Guelph to Mimico, where he was to have served a year's sentence. Moss was escorted as far as Toronto by Inspector Ryan, but was handed over to another official there, and while on the train near Coldwater Junction he made a leap through the window while the train was moving at 25 miles an hour. Another prisoner, named Palmer, also made good his escape at the same time. Moss has not been found, but so far as is known, Moss is still at large.

CATTLE MARKETS

TORONTO LIVE STOCK.

TORONTO, Sept. 14.—Receipts: 813 cars—Cattle 3,072, calves 584, hogs 4,016, sheep 6,907.

A continuation of yesterday's weak tendency was registered in the cattle section at the Union Stock Yards last Saturday, and during the early part of yesterday. This was brought about by the exceptionally heavy receipts and the absence of any strong demand. In fact, the trade ruled dull throughout, and the bid being changed hands by noon. The receipt of shipments direct from the West is given as one of the causes for the insufference on the part of buyers for the heavy loads offered.

The heavy runs on the opening day of the week were thought by many to have been brought about by the rush of fat cattle in the freight rates. It was felt that some shippers were endeavoring to get their stock in the market as possible before the higher rates went into effect on Monday.

Birth Rate Decreases.

PARIS, Sept. 14.—France is again interesting herself in the rapidly-decreasing birth rate. The Journal Official has just announced that during 1919 deaths exceeded the births by 292,000. If this continues, the French race will cease to exist in a few generations. It was a better year, however, than 1918, when the deaths exceeded the births by nearly 390,000. This exceptionally low birth rate was caused by the high cost of living and the loss of young men in the war. In the same period England showed an excess of births over deaths of 277,000, and Germany had an excess of 69,000. This proves that England is now increasing in population at a faster rate than France, where the population is practically stationary. France finds some comfort in this. Brittany, Alsace-Lorraine, and one of the provinces in the Pyrenees where the birth loss has been especially heavy in those provinces.

Experienced.

Sweeping his long hair back with an impressive gesture, the visitor faced the proprietor of the film studio, according to a current story. "I would like to secure a place in your moving-picture company," he said.

"You are an actor?" asked the film man.

"Yes."

"Had any experience acting without audiences?"

A flicker of sadness shone in the visitor's eyes as he replied, "acting without audiences is what brought me here."

Knife Grinder.

A new invention utilizes the bicycle for the business purposes of a knife and scissors grinder.

For this employment the "bike" is made for the time being stationary, when the itinerant operator pauses to undertake a job, being uplifted on a couple of light wooden supports. The knife grinder occupies the seat, as if riding, and with feet on the pedals drives the front wheel.

Revolving on the same axis with the front wheel is a smaller rim that carries a little belt, which connects with and drives the revolving grindstone disk fastened in front of the seat.

When the job is finished the operator disconnects the grindstone, lifts the bicycle off the supports and rides away.

Repartee.

Ex-Pte. Bill McGlook, armed with a perfectly good discharge paper and a military bonus, but still with a distrust of all mankind deep in his heart, approached the clothing salesman. "Ah, yes," said the smiling clerk, rubbing his hands, "you want a suit. And do you want a cuff on the trousers?" "Say," roared the belligerent McGlook, "don't get gay with me. Do you want a crack on the jaw?"

Pitfalls In English.

"Unbending" is not the only word in the language with opposite meanings, as witness the following extracts from a favorite author:

"The noble edifice which he had raised to the skies, he now, in his anger and chagrin, razed to the ground."

"In love did they cleave together, but, hate, like the axe of Fate, came to cleave them apart."

The following is warranted to frighten the French: "On the stroke of two he rushed into the cycle shop. Pulling out his watch and glancing at the clock, he exclaimed: 'I am two to two, too. I must come again by-and-by and buy the bicycle. Good-bye.'"

Whisky.

Whisky, which 500 years ago was used chiefly as a medicine, was originally manufactured exclusively in Scotland, the term being confined to the liquor distilled in the Highlands from barley.

Gifted Imagination.

"Mrs. Ayres has great gifts of imagination, hasn't she?"

"I don't know. Why do you think so?"

"I heard her speaking of the flat they live in as 'our town house'."

Fuel and Power Problem.

Autombobilists are disgusted and alarmed at the soaring price of motor fuel, but how will they feel when a few years hence, it costs two or three times as much as now. Supply is not keeping pace with demand, and a continuing rise of the product is inevitable.

The prospect seems to be that electricity will largely take the place of gasoline. Within the next quarter of a century we shall see in this country an immense development of great plants from which power will be widely distributed. Many such plants will be established at the mouths of coal mines. Others, far more numerous, will utilize falling water for the production of electricity. At intervals along all important traffic roads will be charging stations, to reload the storage batteries of auto-vehicles.

The automotive storage battery is steadily gaining ground. Already it is largely used for trucks, being found as convenient and economical as the gasoline engine where travel is not extended over great distances. The electric storage locomotive has proved for certain uses altogether satisfactory, and in the subterranean tunnels of mines the same means of propulsion is to-day widely adopted.

As fluid fuel grows dearer "canned" power will gain correspondingly in popularity. And another reasonable expectation is that before very long on important traffic roads we shall see the electric trolley taking up a new function. Trucks will be run by trolley; and it is even possible that private vehicles will avail themselves of the same means of propulsion.

The next fifty years will see an astonishing development of water power for electricity over most of the eastern part of this country. Enormous hydro-electric plants will be built at dam sites, established along the rivers, and these, supplemented by steam plants at the mines, will furnish unlimited quantities of the "juice" for manufacturing, transportation and other purposes. Eastern Canada lacks coal, but has plenty of available water power.

This is no mere dream; it has got to come. As coal (the main cost of which to the user is for transportation) becomes dearer, the demand for a less expensive substitute to furnish power, heat and light will compel resort to electricity. Whole regions will be electrified and the motorists of half a century from now will refer to the gasoline tank of their grandfathers in much the same way as we are accustomed to speak of the dodo.

Police Dogs.

The present wave of crime has given an impetus in Great Britain to the training of dogs for police purposes. The training of these dogs calls for a large amount of patience, intelligence and resource, far removed from the old idea of dog breaking, which was usually to be described as unfeelingly into the observance of a few set rules. It is step by step in his daily lessons that a dog gradually becomes a tracker of criminals by their scent, pursues escaping prisoners, discovers missing people, or finds suspected men in concealment. He learns fearlessly to seize and pull down any aggressor, whether his master or himself be attacked, and to do it with the least possible damage, ceasing at once when the enemy gives in. The popular conception of the police dog as a wild, savage beast, actually accounts for the antipathy to his use displayed in some quarters. The public should realise that the properly trained dog is at all times perfectly under control.

Canada In the League.

Sir Herbert Ames is the financial director to the secretary of the League of Nations. He went over to London in September, 1919, before the signing of the Peace Treaty to take this position on trial. He returned to Canada after nine months' work in the League of Nations, thoroughly convinced that the League has come to stay—that it has a great future before it, and that he will be fully occupied in the position which he has accepted. Sir Herbert spoke in the House of Commons on June 22, probably for the last time, as he returned to England on July 5, and does not expect to come back here save for short visits during the coming five years. In his capacity as financial director, Sir Herbert prepares the budget for the Council of the League of Nations. He consults with every department and keeps in touch with all expenditure. When his budget is ratified by the Council, he levies the assessment on all the nations, members of the League. Thirty-six nations have ratified and more than half of these have already paid their dues.

Our Divorce Evil.

One hundred divorce bills were formally put through by the Private Bills Committee at the recent session of Parliament. Before the close, Dr. Michael Steele, chairman, remarked that next year the committee would be more strict in regard to the $200 fine which is imposed when petitions are not placed before the House within the prescribed weeks from the opening of the session.

This year's total of one hundred petitions granted is easily a record. Last year, which was also considered very high, the number of cases was fifty-one, thus showing an increase of practically one hundred per cent. The total number of applications this year was 122, and the majority of these, it is stated, came from Toronto. Returned soldiers were affected in almost fifty per cent. of the applications.

HOW MUCH TOBACCO WILL MY HEART STAND

A question vital to every man who smokes or chews.

It may cost a precious life to find out by experiment.

The heart of every user of tobacco bears a double burden. It does its allotted task and then fights nicotine for supremacy. As long as the heart wins, he lives, and when it loses he dies, but before the final victory of nicotine you pass through many stages of decline and decay, and suffer many pangs. Hearts are like human beings,—some are stronger than others; therefore, some hearts will stand more tobacco than others, but there is a limit to what any heart can stand. The man who puts this additional strain on his heart a dozen times a day by smoking cigarettes, a pipe or cigars, or chewing tobacco, is taking a madman's chance, with health and life to lose, and nothing to win but the chance that he may not lose them. He is indulging in a costly habit at the expense of precious health. Ask any doctor anywhere, and he will tell you that using tobacco is injurious and that it is far better to quit the habit than to experiment to find how much tobacco your heart will stand without serious results.

But the thought of quitting is unpleasant to most men, even to those who know that tobacco injures them, and to really quit takes more will power than they have, and causes more suffering than they can voluntary endure.

When you ask for a "Kodak" be sure you get what you ask for. You can buy the genuine Kodaks in Napanee only at WALLACE'S.

No trap must be set closer than five feet from a muskrat or beaver house. Another important change is that deer or moose cannot be shot or molested while in the water.

The Late Mrs. John B. VanAlstyne

The death of Mrs. John B. VanAlstyne occurred at the age of 75 years at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred J. Shepherd, Hamilton, Ont., on Sept. 13th, after an illness of two weeks. Mrs. VanAlstyne was a life long resident of Napanee and only left two weeks ago to take up her home in Hamilton. Besides a sorrowing husband she leaves two daughters, Mrs. F. J. Shepherd and Mrs. C. Sauve, of Hamilton, three sons, Charles and Richard, of St. Catharines, Ont., and Harold of Hamilton. In religion she was a Methodist and a member of Grace Methodist church and Ladies' Aid. The funeral took place from the residence of Charles VanAlstyne, Robert St., on Wednesday morning and was largely attended, showing the high esteem that she was held in. Service was conducted at the house by Rev. W. P. Rogers, interment at Riverside cemetery. The express extends to the sorrowing family its deepest sympathy in the loss of a loving and devoted wife and mother.

The Late Robt. McNeill.

On the 24th of July, at midnight, at his son's home, in the Township of Richmond, there passed away one of the most respected farmers of this vicinity in the person of Robert McNeill. He had been ill for some time and was confined to his bed for a month suffering from heart failure. He was beloved by all who knew him and his uncomplaining, cheerful disposition was a delight present to the end. Oftimes his voice was heard in prayer until the angel of death hovered near and carried his spirit from this world. The deceased was seventy-seven years of age, and was born on the farm his father settled on, on coming from Ireland, living there as a true saint by endearing himself alike to all neighbors and friends, having always a welcome for all who came. He was the truest of friends and leaves kind thoughts in the memories of all the sorrowing ones. The funeral was held in the Methodist church at Selby, the Rev. E. Farnsworth conducting the service. Robert was one of a large family, some of whom have gone on before, and also leaves to mourn his loss one brother, Archie, at Lime Lake, and two sisters, Mrs. H. Graham, Sharps' Corners; and Mrs. J. Wood, Selby. The remains were placed in Riverside cemetery, there await the great resurrection morn.

THE EXHIBITS

The following Special Report should make interesting reading, and will well repay the readers for the time expended in their perusal

W. D. MIDMER

As usual this enterprising and progressive firm had a good exhibit which was interesting to all about to build or re-model their homes. There was a good array of these interior and exterior fittings that do so much to add to the comfort and beauty of the home; things which are attractive to ladies as well as men. This year this exhibit had a more than usual direct appeal to the people of the county of Lennox and Addington since it showed the finished product of our local woods, which have passed through all the processes in the works of the firm. From the standing timber in the bush to the completed article, ready to serve my lady's kitchen, or to ornament her reception rooms. We understand extensive operations in the woods, and in the manufactory this fall and the coming winter will be of such a nature as to have a very substantial effect on the prosperity of the district.

THE DALY TEA CO., Limited

While this enterprising and progressive company are occupying the same booth as they did last year, it looks altogether different. Last year it was certainly elaborate and beautiful, this year it is more simple in arrangement, but not a whit less beautiful. Unlike the other booths their section has been ceiled over and the walls and ceilings painted white, which give a good background to show up the artistic and symetrical pyramids of the packages in various pleasing colors. On the walls were some most interesting pictures giving views of the tea gardens of Japan, India, and Ceylon; and of various operations in the preparation of tea for the markets of the world. There are also some charming transparencies illustrative of those far distant lands. The bright red and pale green of Daly coffee cans gave an attractive touch of brilliance and the whole effect was charming in the extreme, especially when illuminated in the evening by many colored electric lights. The Dalys will soon become as famous for attractive displays as for their ability to supply the finest cups of tea procurable for fastidious customers. They acquired the art of satisfying their customers nearly a hundred years ago, and they have not yet lost the knack of still satisfying them.

THE J. J. HAINES SHOE HOUSES

This well-known establishment which caters to the highest class of trade in town had a most attractive display of footwear for children, ladies and men. Their display included such well-known and approved makes such as the Empress and other fine brands. An excellent showing was made of rubbers in all styles. Their display of trunks, suit cases, travelling bags were all that could be desired. This firm, who own the finest shoe store in town, also have stores in Belleville, Smiths Falls. When in need of anything in their line be sure to give them a call when you will have a great assortment to choose from, and you will be sure of a square deal.

DAVY & ALLISON

This new firm of stove and hardware dealers, plumbers and steam fitters are now well established in the commercial life of this community. They are Napanee boys, and are well and favorably known throughout the county by the reliable quality of the goods they handle, by their integrity and persevering industry they are sure to receive a very generous patronage. Their fine display in Exhibition Hall was much admired especially the specimen of Happy Thought Peninsular ranges, coal and wood heaters, oil stoves, etc. They well appreciate your patronage and will surely give you a hundred cents worth for a dollar every time.

THE GRAHAM CO.

This exhibit was extremely good and the articles of which it was composed were most artistically arranged. There were to be seen some of the latest and most fashionable models of suits and overcoats for men produced by such well known firms as Lowden, makers of the 20th Century Brands, Bongard's, Cambridge Clothing, etc. There were some good specimens of the latest in shirts, neckties, and gloves. The Graham Co. invite all men to visit their store and be convinced that it will pay them to select their requirements. Best brands of overalls, work shirts, mitts and gloves, and so forth, always on hand.

VANLUVEN'S

A superb exhibition was made in the main building by H. L. VanLuven, of Gerhard Heintzman Pianos and Phonographs, and Newcombe Pianos.

These old reliable lines need no introduction as many of them are adorning some of the best homes in Napanee and surrounding country.

Mr. VanLuven has a very nice show room on the main street of Napanee where he will welcome his numerous old customers and solicits a call from all lovers of high class Musical instruments.

Facts About the Barbados

BARBADOS lies on the eastern edge of the Caribbean Sea. It is with pride that a Barbadian will tell you that since his coral island home became a British possession many years after it had been discovered by Portuguese mariners—who simply named it Los Barbados and passed by, evidently not being impressed with the low-lying land—it has remained British.

In many respects Barbados occupies a unique position. Within her borders, 166 square miles, there are at least 200,000 persons, which makes the island one of the most thickly populated places in the world; the development of industries is carried out on the most scientific lines possible; the system of taxation is scientific—the means, and not the necessaries, of life being taxed; in the matter of experiments in the production of the best kind of sugar cane she is without a rival.

The Barbadian is a traveler; he is an observer; and despite the fact that the struggle for existence among the peasant class must of necessity be keen, it is safe to say that there is no more contented lot of people in the West Indies than the natives of Barbados. Doubtless the spirit of self-determination to work out the colony's salvation has been fostered by the privilege she has enjoyed since the Union Jack was hoisted there in 1606. She has adhered steadfastly to Representative Government, and she has done well. Many of the early settlers were men and women of high literary attainments, who brought with them aspirations that helped to make Britain great, and in Barbados they planted seeds which have produced a people who are known for their industry, intelligence, and community of interests. She possesses a House of Assembly, to which each of the 11 or 12 electoral districts sends two representatives. There is a Legislative Council which is to the Barbadian what the House of Lords is to the man in the Homeland. Then there is a Governor-in-Executive Committee, with an equal number of the people's representatives and officials, to advise the chief executive in the preparation of estimates. Barbados has her Speaker in the House of Assembly, and Mace Bearer.

Barbados is essentially an agricultural centre. In the production of foodstuffs, canes, and cotton, she is ahead of any area of her size in the West Indies. Every square yard of her close upon 80,000 acres of land available for agriculture is cultivated. There are upwards of 400 sugar estates; the majority of them are, it is true, very small, but in her worst year Barbados has been able to produce not less than 50,000 tons of sugar, besides molasses and rum. Barbados has for more than twenty years been the headquarters of the Imperial Department of Agriculture in the West Indies — an institution which came into being when the Caribbean Islands were passing through a period of economic depression through the gradual decline of cane sugar, the mainstay of every island of the group. Barbados was the first place in which a variety of sugar cane which gives 45 tons to the acre was propagated, as against 23 tons obtained elsewhere by other varieties. To-day Barbados seedling canes are being cultivated in the other colonies. Barbados was many years ago the home of cotton production, but it was abandoned, to be revived, however, thanks to the efforts of the Government, the Imperial Department of Agriculture, and the Cotton Growers' Association of Manchester. To-day cotton is produced and ginned in the island. When the colony was passing through a period of industrial stagnation, the Imperial Government, in addition to establishing the headquarters of the newly-created Department of Agriculture in the West Indies there, made a grant of £80,000 to the Government to assist agriculture. This amount was used to form the nucleus of an agricultural bank, from which advances are made to planters.

The colony is known for its yams, potatoes, and other articles of foodstuffs. Thousands of her sons migrated to Panama during the construction of the canal; in fact, Barbadians are to be found in almost every quarter of the globe; but the Government has so conserved the interests of the people that very few persons from other lands are seen here. Chinese or Assyrians are not permitted to land to engage in business, as is the case with Jamaica or British Guiana; East Indian laborers are not to be found on the sugar plantations. It is the Barbadian first and last.

Barbados is regarded as a good field for petroleum. An English company is there prospecting for oil. A railway service is operated by the Government, and the mule car service of Bridgetown is about to give way to electric trams. Barbados was the first West Indian colony to produce a permanent, first class appointment trading agents in England; she was one of the first colonies of the group to signify her intention of entering into a reciprocity treaty with Canada, by which she has been able to find a steady market for her sugar, molasses, and other produce.

Barbados is anxious for improved shipping facilities with Canada and the Mother Country, and also better arrangements to supply ships with water and fuel at Carlisle Bay—her only shipping port. And the people are in favor of a Federated West Indies.—London Times.

A most interesting feature of the Old Boys' Memorial Fair at Picton will be the exhibition of physical training given by a squad of cadets from the Royal Military College, Kingston. This will be an entirely separate feature from the exhibit of horsemanship by the Cadets from the same College and will be given by a different body of men. The Str. Brockville's excursion to Picton will give you a delightful outing on the water and will enable you to spend an enjoyable day at Picton Fair—Steamer Brockville will leave for Picton on both days at 9.30 a.m.

ASTONISHED OVER RESULTS, HE SAYS

"Words are not Strong Enough To Express my Gratitude," Says This Toronto Man.

"I have no word of praise strong enough to express my gratitude for what Tanlac has done for me," says John Howard, of 4 Beverly St., Toronto, to the Tanlac representative recently.

"I hardly know where to begin in telling about my case," he said, "but for awhole year before I started using Tanlac I suffered so with nervous dyspepsia I got no pleasure out of life. No matter how careful I was about what I ate, trouble started soon afterwards. My food would seem to lie on my like a lump of lead and then it would sour and ferment and form gas that bloated me up until I could hardly breathe and I had sharp pains all around my heart. I frequently had such headaches that they almost drove me distracted and my nerves were in a terrible state. I tried everything in the way of medicines but none of them ever gave me more than temporary relief.

"When I saw so many Montreal people coming out with strong statements as to the great benefits they had received from taking Tanlac, I began to take notice, and decided to give it a trial myself. Well, I've taken four bottles in all, and it is nothing less than remarkable the way that medicine has settled my stomach trouble and built me up. I can honestly say that for the first time in many a long day I know what it is to really enjoy life and health. I can now eat anything set before me without ever suffering the least inconveniences from indigestion or gas. Headaches are a thing of the past and my nerves are as steady as a die. I sleep like a log the whole night through and get up in the mornings feeling fresh and strong. I shall always have a good word to say for Tanlac and have every confidence in recommending it to others."

Tanlac is sold in Napanee at WALLACE'S Drug Store, in Camden East by R. J. OSTER, in Wagarville by S. JACKSON. (advt.)

Missing her two-year-old, the mother went to look for him, and found the youngster in the kitchen on the floor by the coal-scuttle, carefully wiping a piece of coal with a little white handkerchief. The Marrying Parson.

Winnipeg claims the champion "marrying parson" of Canada. He is Canon R. B. McElheran, rector of St. Matthew's Anglican Church, who has united more than 2,500 couples in wedlock in the fourteen years of his pastorate there.

Every day of June this year, excepting only Sundays, he married no fewer than two couples—one day, the 16th, he established a new record for Winnipeg by wedding seven couples.

His wife says the reason for his popularity with young men and women matrimonially inclined is his own happy married life.

"We've made such a success of our own marriage that the young people just naturally come to him to start their life's romance," she declares.

Many New Houses.

It has been estimated that 800,000 new houses are needed in the United Kingdom properly to house the population. All building was at a standstill throughout the war. Because of the greatly increased cost of building materials and the increased cost of labor these houses cannot be built for less than twice the amount they would have cost in 1914. Thousands of big houses in London are for sale but these are of no use to newlywedds who in most instances cannot afford to maintain them, nor can they get the servants necessary to keep up such establishments. It has been found too costly to try to convert many of these houses into apartments. They now are monuments to pre-war and present family life in London, when servants were employed by the dozen.

Jute Industry In British.

The district of Dundee is the centre of the jute industry in the United Kingdom and practically all the raw jute imported into the country was formerly brought to Dundee. Last year 1,200,000 bales annually were consumed in it is the staple industry of Du and employs normally about 25,0 workers.

Modern Tramps.

The constable of an Ontario village, a man of exceeding good nature, found it necessary to lock up three tramps who had strayed into his jurisdiction. Shortly after the arrest he was met by the mayor of the village, who, observing the constable hurrying down the main street, asked: "Where are you going, constable?" "Oh," explained the constable, "the three tramps I just locked up want to play bridge and I'm hunting for a fourth."

The Thirteenth Commandment

The women got rid of Tom Duane gracefully—Lelia asked him to put them in a taxicab, as they had still much shopping to do. They rode to a department store, and Lelia started another account. They rode back to the apartment. There they found a day letter from Daphne's father to her mother.

"As you see by papers big Cowper firm failed today for ten million dollars this hits us hard you better come home not buy anything more situation serious but hope for best don't worry well love. WESLEY."

Mrs. Kip dropped into a chair. The shock was so great that it shook first from her a groan of sympathy for her husband.

"Your poor father! And he's worked so hard and been so careful."

Bayard came home late for dinner and in a state of grave excitement. The great Cowper wholesale establishment had fallen like a steeple, crushing many a house. Indirectly it had rattled the windows of Bayard's firm; had stopped the banks from granting an important loan. Bayard spent a bad day downtown. The news of his father's distress was a heavy blow. But he tried to dispense encouragement to the three women who could not quite realize what all the excitement was about, or why the disaster of a big chain of wholesale stores would be of any particular importance to them.

Bayard was just saying: "I tell you, Leila honey, I was the wise boy when I grabbed you, for now I've got you, and I need you. Thank the Lord I'm not loaded up with debt. I've kept clear of that."

Leila said nothing, but thought hard. Bayard was silent. Later the door-bell rang and a young sewing girl brought two big boxes from Dutilh's. They were so big that there was no concealing them. Leila made a timid effort to escape with hers, but Bayard was full of a cheerful curiosity:

"What's all that, honey?"

"Oh, it's just a—a little thing I picked up today at Dutilh's."

"What is it, a scarf or something? Give a fellow a look at it."

He began to untie the knot. Sealed across the cord was an envelope, with a statement. Bayard tore it free. Leila snatched at it. Bayard laughed and dodged her. Leila pursued. He was a ghastly game of tag for her, and Daphne and her mother looked on in guilty dread. Bayard, whooping with laughter, dashed into his room and closed the door, held it fast while Leila pounded and pleaded with him.

His laughter was quenched sharply. There was a silence. He opened the door and walked out, a sickly pallor at his lips, the statement in his hand:

"This can't be right, honey: Bayard Kip to Dutilh, debtor. Peach-blow satin gown—two hundred and seventy-five dollars.' The price is ridiculous, and I have no account there."

"He—he insisted on my opening one."

"But I don't want to open any accounts. I pay my bills in thirty days or discount them for cash. I can't pay this in thirty days. Not a penny I can see ahead of me is laid out."

"I—I'm sorry," Leila faltered. "You said the times were getting better."

"I thought they were. I hoped they were. But they've gone bad again. Besides, I was trying to cheer you up, to give you a happy honeymoon. And I bought you everything you saw abroad. And it wasn't enough! When will you get enough clothes!"

Leila had stared incredulous at the calamitous result of her tender impulse to beautify herself in his eyes. Then tears came gushing and she ran to her room and locked the door.

Bayard did not follow her. He turned for comfort to his mother and Daphne. He noted the other box. Daphne had not dared to open it.

Bayard ripped the envelope from its cord and read:

"Bayard Kip to Dutilh, Dr. Parchment-toned gown, for Miss Daphne Kip, two hundred and seventy-five dollars."

He was parchment-toned himself as he shook the statement at Daphne, and whispered, huskily, "What's this?"

Daphne could not muster any courage. She explained with craven remorse, "I saw a gown that I—I needed there, and I—I— He offered to let it on your account till I could get the money."

Bayard was choked with wrath and a terror greater than hers.

"I go to my office and work like a fiend all day, and I come home to find that my wife and my sister have run me into debt for—five hundred and fifty dollars. And the firm, the big firm I work for, had to extend a note for seven hundred and fifty because we couldn't meet it!"

His mother tried to stem the tide of Bayard's rage, to turn his wrath with a soft answer:

"I guess it's all my fault, honey. The dresses looked so pretty on the girls I urged them to take them. You ought to see how beautiful they are. Go put the dress on, Daphne, and let your brother see how sweet you look in it."

"Sweet! She looks sweet in it! It's beautiful! And that justifies anything. Lord, what did you make 'em out of, these women!"

Mrs. Kip nudged Daphne and whispered, "Go on, put the dress on; let him see you in it."

She spoke with [illegible] greatest calmness, but Daphne stared at her with derision, and edged away and spoke in a tone as biting as cold blue vitriol.

"Put it on, mother! Do you think I'd ever wear the thing? I'll send it back tomorrow morning at daybreak. And I'll never take a thing that any man pays for as long as I live."

Bayard roared at her over his shoulder: "You won't take anything that any man pays for, eh? What are you going to live on—air?"

She answered him, grimly, "There are several million women in this country earning their own living, and I'm going to be one of them."

His comment was a barking. "Hah!" She lugged the box away to her room. Bayard flung himself into a chair and listened to the cauldron of his own hateful thoughts. Gradually they ceased to bubble and stew. He could hear now the muffled beat of Leila's sorrow. He resisted it for a while, sneered at it, raged at it, and then at the cruelty of the world.

Leila's sobs had stopped now and Bayard listened for them anxiously. Perhaps she had died of grief. A lasso seemed to have caught him about the shoulders; it was dragging him to the door.

He went there at last, and listened. He heard a low whimpering, unendurably appealing. He tapped on the door and called through it.

"Leila, honey love, forgive me. I've been the little gown. It's beautiful. You shall have it—and a dozen like it. Please forgive me and love me again. And I'll buy you anything you want. Please. Please don't keep me standing outside your door. Honey! Leila love!"

The door opening, he slipped through to take refuge with his Leila.

A moment later the doorbell rang. Daphne checked the mild whose ear to the door fascinatingly entertained, and told her that if the caller were Mr. Wimburn he was to wait outside in the hall. It was Wimburn and Daphne went out to him. He greeted her with the zest of a young lover. Daphne gave him a cold cheek to kiss, and then, pulling her engagement ring from her finger, placed it in his hand.

"What—what's this, Daphne?" he stuttered.

"It's your ring. I'm giving it back. The engagement is off—indefinitely."

"For heaven's sake, why? What have I done?"

"Nothing. Neither have I. But I'm going to do something."

"What are you going to do, Daphne?"

"I don't know—but something."

"Don't you love me any more?"

"Just as much as ever—more than ever. And I'll prove it, too."

"Prove it by putting the ring back on."

"Never! Send it back and save your money. That's what I'm going to do with what I've bought. Kiss me good night and go, please."

She left him outside and closed the door as lovingly as she could.

While Clay waited for the elevator to come up and take him down he stared at the ring with sheep's eyes, tossed it, and caught it awkwardly, and laughed and almost spoke his thought aloud:

"Funny thing. I haven't paid for it yet. Got an insulting letter from the jeweler, too, this very afternoon."

But Daphne was thumbing the telephone book to see if she could find Tom Duane's number.

CHAPTER VIII.

She failed to run Duane to earth in the telephone book. She was at a loss for another source of directions. She was new to New York and did not know how to set out on such a pursuit.

She went to her room, and found her mother there, dismally engaged in

She Went to Her Room and Found Her Mother There, Dismally Engaged in Writing a Letter to Her Father.

writing a letter to her father, breaking to him the dreadful news that the trousseau was to cost far more for far less. She was asking for extra money at once. Daphne smiled bitterly and said: "Rub it out and do it over again, mamma. There ain't goin' to be no trousseau. No wedding bells for me."

Mrs. Kip rolled large eyes in Daphne's direction and looked deaf. Daphne held out her betrothal engagement ring per in proof that she and Clay were betrothed.

"Good gracious!" was Mrs. Kip's profane comment. "Why on earth did you—"

"Because I'm too expensive for him."

"What are you going to do—go back to Cleveland and tell everybody that you're not going to get married, after all this trouble?"

"No, I'm not going back to Cleveland, and I am going to get married—but later, much later."

"I hate conundrums," said Mrs. Kip. "Better tell me the answer, for I won't guess. What are you going to do?"

"I'm going to lend a hand," said Daphne. "Do my share. Get a job and earn my board and keep."

"Heaven help us! You've gone crazy!" Mrs. Kip exclaimed. "You get to bed and you'll feel better in the morning. I'll finish my letter."

She added, unbeknownst to Daphne, a postscript as long as the letter, contradicting all she had just written and urging her husband to come East at once and take charge of his unruly daughter. She dropped it in the mail chute, and it fell into a bottomless pit, along with her other hopes.

Daphne and her mother were uneasy at the prospect of the breakfast encounter with the bridal couple. There had been a sense of strain the first morning. But now a bitter quarrel had intervened—that first ugly quarrel when the wedge of finance is driven between united hearts.

Bayard and Leila, however, arrived at the table all smiles, more amorous than ever. Lelia wore a triumphant smile, such as Delilah must have worn the second time she went out walking with her big beau.

It was plain to the anxious eyes of Mrs. Kip and Daphne that Lelia had emerged from the quarrel with all the loot and aggravated power.

She had taken advantage of her husband's trust and abused his generosity recklessly, with no more evil motive, indeed, than the wish to beautify herself in his honor, and yet with recklessness.

It was not altogether Leila's fault if the lesson she learned, perhaps unconsciously, from the combat was something like this:

"I ran my husband into debt without consulting him. His listless love woke from its torpor and enchanted me with a first-class demonstration of its energy. He stormed. I wept thrillingly. He apologized, begged to be permitted to bring me some more nice things. Ergo, when home life grows dull, I can always stir up the fire by buying something we can't afford. When I want anything I must get it. I shall be scolded, then kissed and treated with awe. If I hadn't bought it I wouldn't have had it, nor the bonus that goes with it. If we had not quarreled we should have missed the rapture of 'making up.'"

This is one of the first lessons that certain sorts of husbands teach to certain sorts of wives.

When the man of the house had departed for his office, and the waiter had carried off the breakfast relics, the three women were left alone in a completely feminine conclave. They faced life like three Norns: the old mother, the new wife, and the deferred wife, each from her coign of disadvantage.

The two married women turned on the maid, with common resentment. They were married and dependent and she had her independence. They were Tories and she a Whig. It was their privilege to rail at things as they were, but it was their religion to frown on changing them. Mrs. Kip senior spoke for Mrs. Kip junior.

"Now, Daphne, tell us what is this new foolishness all about?"

Daphne answered, stoutly: "It's not foolishness. It's the first glimmer of sense I've ever had. I'm sick of the idea of always living on the mercy of some man, taking his charity or his extravagance. I've always been a drag on poor daddy, and I was getting ready to shift my weight over to poor Clay's back. But I don't think a woman ought to be dependent on a man. I think she ought to bear her share of the burden."

"As if she didn't!" Mrs. Kip broke out. "As if the home weren't just as much labor as the office."

Lelia attacked her from another direction. "For goodness' sake, Daphne, don't lose your head. Just imagine for a moment that a husband will be happier and love his wife better because she earns wages. The harder you work for men, the better they like somebody else. The harder a man works for you the better he likes you. Best of all, he loves the woman that tries to break him."

Daphne's answer was a snappy: "I don't believe it! I'd despise a man that felt that way."

The three women wrangled with wise saws and modern instances, and they were in a perilous state of dissension when the telephone rang. Lelia answered it and her outcries of igdignation alarmed Mrs. Kip and Daphne till they learned the cause.

Bayard had called up to say that the luncheon party must be postponed. Outrageous business had made another insidious attack on love.

Lelia came from the telephone in a state of desperation mitigated by the fact that Bayard had asked her to take his mother and Daphne shopping and buy them and herself something worth while as an atonement for his abandonment.

So they set forth again on another onset against the ramparts of beauty.

To the silent horror of Daphne and her mother, Lelia was persuaded to buy a new coat and a new hat and to pay for them by the convenience of opening two new accounts at the suggestion of two soapy salesmen. Bayard's surrender after his first battle had already accomplished the expectable result.

Everything was the very latest things and yet was marked down. But Daphne priced things now with a new soul. She was thinking in the terms of wages and toil.

She was going to earn fifty thousand a year some day, but she supposed that at first she would earn very little —twenty-five dollars a week, perhaps.

For the first time in her existence she vividly understood how all these fairy tissues were the products of human labor, paid for with wages and to be sold for other wages. Pearls were drops of sweat; perfumes were the signs of weary men; soft fabrics were the hard spinning of human silkworms.

Bayard was even now cracking his brain to accumulate what three women were squandering.

So Daphne meditated as she had never meditated before and might not often meditate again. She refused to buy a thing. Her mother could only explain her mood as a symptom of an illness and advise her to get home to bed. There was something suspicious in the condition of a girl who could look with qualms of conscience or appetite on such a banquet.

At length fatigue and faintness reminded Mrs. Kip, senior, that she had not eaten and the hour was late. She called for her luncheon and they went together to a tearoom. Here Daphne had another attack of eccentricity; a stubborn determination to go home and send back to Dutilh the wicked gown that she had bought of him on credit.

She had left the house without returning it and she was afraid that there would be difficulties if she delayed. Fortunately there had been no alterations in the gown.

Perhaps there is no form that satan takes oftener than that of a fashionable gown. In that shape he offers women the conquest of the world. But Daphne resisted him and said to Lelia: "Get thee behind me, satan! I'm going to return this gown and let Dutilh give Bayard credit for it. I won't look at another gown till I can pay for it out of my own earnings. I'll not get married till I can buy the rest of my trousseau myself. I've decided that an independent woman must buy her own trousseau."

Perhaps There Is No Form That Satan Takes Oftener Than That of a Fashionable Gown.

Even in the eyes of ambition this promised to require a fairly long period—a period so lenghty that she wondered if Clay's love would outlast it.

She did love him and the thought of losing him alarmed her more than the thought of losing the precious gown.

Lelia woke from her meditation with a sudden "Come along; we must dress for the tea-fight."

Mrs. Kip, senior, amused the young Kips by thinking aloud: "I wonder if that nice Mr. Duane will be at the tea."

"Oh! shame shame!" cried Lelia. "It's a regular intrigue. No, he won't be there. Telephone him at the Racquet club and he'll come to you. He's usually there."

She did not see the start the artless hint gave Daphne, who had learned by accident what she had not known how to find out otherwise. Daphne concealed her agitation in the briskness with which she concluded the affair of the Dutilh gown. She folded it up and laid it back in the box as if it were a baby she was about to leave on a doorstep. She kissed it good-by and put the lid over it and tied it up with a crazy combination of strings of various sorts.

She refused to go to the tea party, now that the gown was lost, and she said she had letters to write.

But when her mother and Lelia had left her she wrote only one letter—a note of regretful rejection to Daphne. She pinned it to the box and sent it off by a messenger. Then she telephoned to Tom Duane.

She did not quite realize the temerity of calling a man at his club, and Tom Duane misunderstood her, imputed her innocence to its opposite. He remembered her as a pretty thing. If she were brazen—well, he liked brass in certain forms. When she said that she wanted to have a serious talk with him at his convenience, he made it the immediate moment at the cost of breaking an engagement at tennis.

He asked her if she would not meet him somewhere for tea, but she said that she preferred to see him at her brother's apartment. His invitation aroused her suspicion. Her invitation confirmed his.

Daphne's heart was beating excitedly while she waited for him and she began to feel that she had put herself in a wrong light. When Duane arrived and the maid showed him into the living room Daphne tried to redeem herself by a businesslike directness.

"Mr. Duane, you must think it very peculiar of me to drag you up here."

"I think it's mighty kind of you."

"You say that before you hear what I'm going to ask you. I'm going to ask you to do me a tremendous favor."

"That will be doing me a tremendous favor," he said.

Then she amazed him with her request: "You offered yesterday—of course I know you didn't mean it—but you offered to get me a job with a theatrical manager."

Duane's hospitable smile hardened into a grimace of anxiety. He mumbled, "Oh, yes."

"You know Mr. Raven—or whatever his name is—very well, don't you?"

"Mr. Reben—oh, yes—yes, I know him fairly well."

"I want to go on the stage. Would you dare introduce me to Mr. Reben?"

"Indeed I will, and prond to do it."

"Do you think he'll give me a—a job?"

"I'll make him."

"How can I ever repay you?"

Her hand went out to him and he took it and squeezed it, and it squeesed back gratefully. But he did not let go. Duane seemed to be excited suddenly.

Daphne drew her hand back, but his came with it, and he followed close upon. There was a look in his eye that made her uneasy. His voice was uncertain as he said:

"You can repay me easily enough, if you want to."

"I do. But how? How?" she asked anxiously, not quite daring to wrench her hand free.

"By—by being—by being kind to me."

"Kind? How?"

He did not answer with words, but he lifted her hand with both of his to his lips. It was an act of oldfangled gallantry that could hardly be resented. But, manlike, having made a formal surrender, he tried to take command. One hand held hers, the other swept round her shoulders and pressed her against him, without roughness yet with strength. His lips moved now, not toward her hand, but toward the sacredness of her mouth.

CHAPTER IX.

Daphne bent her head so quickly that his pressed lips touched her hair. She flung backward and thrust him away and broke from his hold.

"Agh!" she groaned. "I suppose I deserve the insult—for trusting you."

"I didn't intend it for an insult." He followed her with pleading arms.

She took them away and found herself in a corner, flushed, furious, at bay.

"How dare you?" she stormed, and thought with nausea how often the phrase had been used and with what hypocrisy.

It seemed to fall familiarly on his ear, for he laughed comfortably. "How can I help it?"

"If you touch me I'll—I'll hit you."

He paused, stared deep into her eyes, "Do you mean it?"

"Of course I mean it."

"I'm sorry," he sighed. "But won't you let me explain?"

"You don't have to. It's all my fault for having you here."

"Oh, no, I beg you not to think that I'm such a cad."

"Please go!"

"All right!" he murmured, and left the room.

She heard his stick rattle as he took it from the umbrella jar. She thought: "There goes my opportunity—my career! Well, let it go! It wasn't worth the price!"

Duane appeared at the door again to say: "Oh, by the way, that introduction to Mr. Reben. Do you still want it?"

"No, thank you, not from you. Good-by."

He bowed farewell, then changed his mind, entered the room and sat down, and motioned her to a seat as if it were his house.

"Miss Kip, may I say one word to you? I don't pretend to understand you women people. I'm not sure now just how sincere you are, just how much of a change you may think me for being rebuffed so easily. Experience is no guide. But—well—anyway—what I wanted to say is this—there is hardly any man that would even bother a woman unwilling to be bothered if he could only be certain that he was really bothering her. Do I make myself clear?"

"Not in the least."

"Well, then, I give up. But I must leave you a bit of advice. You say you want to earn money. If you do, on the stage or in any other business, you will meet a lot of men who will feel it their duty to try to kiss you at the first opportunity. It's not only because you are so pretty, for I really believe the homeliest girls get the most kisses. Perhaps it's because they're not so particular—but, anyway, it's not because men are villains that they try to kiss women, but because they're obliging. There is an old superstition—I don't know how false it is, or how true; no man can know—but there is a tradition that every woman expects every man she meets to offer her an insult—that's the technical term—as soon as they are alone.

"That feeling is what women are going to run into every time they try to force their way into business. It will die out, I suppose, to a certain extent, when you grow used to it. It will be one of the last privileges you'll lose. You're already permitted to stand up in street cars and go out after dark alone. By and by you will have to make your advances to the men yourselves in the frankest manner,' instead of subtly as now."

Daphne broke in coldly, "That will be a very welcome day to most of us."

Somehow it did not sound convincing to her. There was grave conviction, however, in his response:

"It will be a mighty welcome day to us poor men, Miss Kip. For most men haven't the faintest desire to spoon with women. It's hard enough for some of them to keep their own sweethearts and wives sufficiently caressed. Then there's another thing—if I'm not boring you—I haven't made as long a speech since I was a schoolboy and recited 'Spartacus to the Gladiators.'"

"Go on, please," said Daphne. "A woman doesn't often get the chance of hearing a man tell the truth about these things."

Her sarcasm chilled him a little, but he went on:

"I just want to say this—it's an old man's advice to a young woman going into business: when a man asks for a job he brings references, and they are investigated; or he answers a lot of questions, and he is given a trial. Or when two men meet in a club or elsewhere they shake hands. That handshake itself is a kind of investigation of character. They learn each other's politics and religion and prejudices as soon as they can.

"So when a man meets a woman he is apt to be thrown with a good deal he is apt to say, 'What sort is she?' But the thing that annoys a man most about having to do business with a woman is the fear that he will either compromise her or disappoint her. That's the first problem to get out of the way; and there's nothing easier for a woman to do than to convince a man that she doesn't want him to try to flirt with her—if she doesn't."

Daphne cried, "In heaven's name, tell me how it's done."

"The way to convince him is to be convinced yourself. If you're sincere he'll know it."

"But I was sincere with you, and you didn't know it."

"I didn't know it at first, but I soon did—I think—and now that's what I'm driving at all this long while. If you're going into business competition with men, play fair. Every now and then one of them, as soon as he finds himself alone with you, will be polite enough to insult you. But the average man will let you alone if you'll let him alone. Suppose he does make a mistaken advance, if you could be sensible enough not to get mad, not to feel besmirched, but just take it as a matter of course and say frankly: 'No, thanks, I'm not interested. I understand you perfectly, but you needn't bother,' or something like that, and say it honestly, the rest would be plain sailing.

Cricket Balls.

Cricket balls are made of oxhide, cork, and worsted.

One oxhide will furnish enough leather for about six dozen balls. After the hide has been thoroughly seasoned, cleaned, and scraped, it is cut into strips four or five inches wide, from which small sections—four to a ball—are marked out. Care is taken that the finished article is composed of four pieces from the same portion of the hide to ensure similarity of color and substance.

The sections are next shaved to a uniform thickness and marked with a centre. This is made by binding strips of cork with damp worsted upon a small cork foundation, and then hammering it into shape and baking in an oven to strengthen it by contraction. During the fitting process the weight of the ball is regulated to the standard five and a half to five and three-quarter ounces. Finally the two covers are pressed over the interior in a screw vice and sewn together with silk, flax, or catgut.—Tit Bits.

HOW YOU CAN TELL GENUINE ASPIRIN

Only Tablets with "Bayer Cross" are Aspirin—No others!

There is only one Aspirin, that marked with the "Bayer Cross"—all other tablets are only acid imitations.

Genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" have been prescribed by physicians for nineteen years and proved safe by millions for Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Colds, Rheumatism, Lumbago, Neuritis.

Handy tin boxes of 12 tablets—also larger "Bayer" packages, can be had at any drug store. Made in Canada.

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada), of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid.

While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company, Ltd., will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

Lime and Fertilizers.

Prof. H. O. Buckman, of the Soils Technology Department, Cornell University, at the recent Soil Fertility Conference held at the O. A. C., pointed out how the continuous use of sulphate of ammonia tended to depiete the lime, but where lime was supplied in sufficient abundance this form of ammonia-carrier became very important. The general impression is that acid phosphate leaves the soil acid. However, this is far from correct; indeed, general experience points to the fact that acid phosphate tends to leave the soil neutral or alkaline. The term acid phosphate is a misnomer and gives one absolutely the wrong idea.

There is great need for further advocacy of higher grade fertilizers. Fertilizers will used in place of changes to take place in the soil, but these changes should be for the better and not for the worse. My conclusion is that rational fertilizing consists in the adjustment of the composition and the amount of fertilizer to soil and crop in such a way that you should get paying results from your investment, and at the same time any change in the soil should be a change for the better. This summary means a number of things—utilizing all farm manure, crop residue, green manure, the addition of lime and the rational use of well-prepared, well-balanced fertilizers to supplement the plant food of the soil."

A Few Words For the Silo.

Twice as much feed can be saved from a crop by using a silo as by cutting or shocking the corn and feeding it dry.

The silage-fed steer makes twice as cheap gains as the one fed on dry roughage.

A feed that owners of show cattle are not afraid to use in conditioning their stock for the show ring is not a feed that any stock raiser need be afraid to make big use of; ensilage is such feed.

The stave silo, if well constructed, is a good silo, and a good silo is worth a couple of pairs a year to you.

Dairy farming without a silo means cheating the fields and the cattle.

To Stop Hogs Rooting.

Just as good as a ring in the nose for keeping hogs from rooting is a regular feed supply of a mixture of charcoal, sulphate of iron, powdered glauber salts, sal soda, rock phosphate, limestone and slack coal, according to a hog raiser who pasture his swine entirely an alfalfa.

Control of Weeds.

Six experiments carried on for eight successive years under the direction of the Experimental Farms at Guelph, Ont., have yielded very valuable information regarding the control of such weeds as perennial sow, thistle, twitch grass, bladder campion and wild mustard. This information is briefly summarized by Prof. J. E. Howitt, M. S. Agr., O.A.C., Guelph, as follows:

1. That good cultivation followed by rape sown in drills promotes a means of eradicating the perennial sow thistle and twitch grass.

2. That rape is a most valuable crop to use in the construction of twitch grass than buckwheat.

3. That rape gives much better results in the eradication of twitch grass and perennial sow thistle when grown in drills and cultivated than it does when sown broadcast.

4. That thorough deep cultivation at the end of the six months gave an average of 46.4 per cent. of destruction in fall and spring followed by a well cared for hoed crop will destroy bladder campion.

5. That mustard may be prevented from seeding in oats, wheat or barley by spraying with twenty per cent. solution of iron sulphate at a time of serious injury to the standing crop or to fresh seeding of clover.

In addition to this experimental and economic work of the Agricultural and Experimental Union, the Department of Botony has carried on various experiments in the eradication of many of the worst weeds of the province. A special bulletin on "Weeds of Ontario" has been published which has been revised five times. Many thousand copies of this bulletin have been distributed throughout the province and there is still a continued demand for it. Articles also dealing with weed problems have been published from time to time in the agricultural press.

September Butter Packs Well.

If not already provided, now is the time to pack butter for winter use, unless a fresh supply is assured at reasonable prices. Pack good butter soildly in a crock, or wax and paper-lined wooden package; cover with a clean cotton cloth or heavy parchment paper and salt paste, and store in a cool, dark cellar, or in a commercial cold storage, if one is available. September butter made from good cream, preferably pasteurized, should keep all winter, and is usually from five to ten cents a pound cheaper than fresh-made winter butter. Never store or pack butter in prints for winter use, as there is too much surface exposed to the air, even when placed in brine.

GREEDY WHITE GRUBS

Larvae of the Big May Beetle or "June ug."

Directions Come From the Click Beetle—Rotation of Crops Best Remedies for These Insect Pests —Cider Making.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

WHITE grubs are the larvae of the large dark brown May beetles, or "June Bugs," as they are commonly called, which are familiar to everyone. The grubs breed for the most part in old pasture sods where the sod has not been broken up for some years. When fully grown they are thick, fat creatures, white in color, with the body partially curled up and the last segments of a darker hue from the food showing through the skin. They feed on the roots of the grass, and when this has been ploughed up they attack whatever plant may be grown. Three years are spent underground, very like the beetles appear often in great swarms, in the early summer and devour the tender foliage of trees and shrubs. After benzing about in the early evening they settle down to feed and when daylight comes they hide away underground where the soil is loose and under grass or rubbish about fences and buildings.

The grubs, being underground feeders, are very difficult to control. A great variety of experiments have been made with chemicals of many sorts, but none has proved successful. The only method of control is the adoption of a system of rotation of crops. No field should be left in grass for more than three years in old pasture, when broken up, is often found to be full of these grubs and they will attack the roots of any plants that are grown in spite of their ordinary food which has been removed. Corn and potatoes will suffer advocacy of higher grade fertilizers. least affected by them and may be seeded with rye. After the second year any crop will usually be safe. Deep ploughing in October before the weather becomes cold will expose the grubs and destroy many. Pigs and poultry, crows and other birds and skunks greedily devour them. Where the old field is large it would be well to confine them with hurdles to a small portion each year, so that the rest is cleared move them on to a fresh feeding ground.

Wireworms are the larvae of click beetles, so called from their curious habit of springing up in the air with a "click" when laid upon their backs. The pupae are long and narrow, rounded above, with very short legs, and usually dull gray or black in color. The grubs are long and round, with a very hard skin, by which they get their name of Wireworms, and yellow or whitish in color. Their life history is very similar to that of the White Grubs, but they live in old pastures and take two or three years to mature. They feed upon the roots of any plant they can find to grow where they are, and are especially injurious to corn and potatoes, in the latter of which they often burrow great holes. As in the case of the White Grubs, no treatment of the soil with poisons of any kind has been found effective, and the intelligent idea that salt will kill them, but this is an entire mistake. The only remedy is a short rotation of crops, as in the case of White Grubs. Ploughing in August and cross-ploughing in September will destroy great numbers. Clean cultivation, leaving no weeds or other shelter for the beetles, in fence corners and elsewhere is also of importance.

Break up the old pastures is the advice all farmers should follow.—Dr. C. J. S. Bethune, O. A. College, Guelph.

Cider Making.

Sweet cider is unfermented apple juice and hard cider is fermented apple juice. To get the juice apples are either crushed or ground in a cider mill and the juice expressed from the pulp.

The fermentation of apple juice, or any other fruit juice, is brought about by the development in it of yeast. Yeast cells are microscopic plants invisible to the naked eye and are always present on the surface of fruit. When the fruit is crushed to get the juice many of these cells get into the juice, and if these are not destroyed they will induce fermentation.

Consequently, in the manufacture of sweet cider we must destroy the yeast cells that are present and prevent others from getting in. The usual way of doing this is to pasteurize the juice immediately after it is obtained from the fruit and store away in well-sealed containers, in the case of cider the pasteurization process means heating the juice to 170 degrees F. for ten minutes and then filling into containers that have been scalded and can be tightly corked. Care should be taken not to let the temperature go above 175 degrees F. during pasteurization or the character of the juice will be injured. The juice is then stored away at a low temperature to prevent the yeast cells from growing.

Hard cider is produced by allowing the fresh apple juice to ferment in the cask. The fermentation is naturally induced by the activities of the yeast cells that get into the juice from the surface of the apples. As, however, there are various sorts of yeast cells and also mail, mold spores liable to be on the fruit which may injure the quality of the cider, spoiling the flavor, it is a good plan to control the the fermentation either by first pasteurizing the juice and then adding a good yeast for the purpose as soon as obtained from the apples. The addition of this good yeast will hasten the desired fermentation and check the mold development.

The best temperature for fermentation is 75 degrees F.—Prof. D. H. Jones, O. A. College, Guelph.

Had Thrilling Escape.

LONDON, Sept. 7.—The situation in Mesopotamia shows improvement if the disturbed areas, but is becoming tenser in districts not yet in open rebellion, according to a War Office communication. The Sjawas Railway station was attacked on August 29 and is still besieged by increasing numbers. The British political officers at Munafaik were saved from assassination by fanatics by escaping in an airplane. Several other stations have been attacked.

St. Catharines, Ont.:—"I was in a very miserable condition when I first started taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription sixteen years ago. I suffered and was extremely emaciated and weak. Although I was a young woman my doctor thought I was going through the critical stage of life but after using these remedies my strength returned, another child came and from that time on my health was perfect and my weight increased. I really believe that Dr. Pierce's remedies saved my life and I shall always praise them as long as I live."—MRS. ELIZA OVERHOLT, 43 Beach St.

Favorite Prescription should have the full confidence of every woman in Canada because it contains no alcohol and no narcotic. MORE FARM OWNERS.

Conditions Have Changed In Province of Ontario.

One reason for the increase in the shortage of hired help for the farms is the increase in the number of farm owners, and though this feature may result in an increase in production of foodstuffs for distribution this year, the outcome within the next few years should be a vast improvement of the present condition. When the land now productive acres have fallen into the hands of a comparative few, production has been retarded, and though it must be admitted that the few can, on the average, operate to his own best advantage on a fair-sized farm, it is essential that we have, in order to do so. If he can't secure the help in any case, it is better that the land should be divided among a large number of small holders than that it should lie idle in the hands of large owners.

For the promise of a dividing up of much of the land now held in large quantities by individuals, we may thank conditions that have gone to raise land values were it not for the time place many in position to purchase who were never before in such position, and might have gone land hungry for the rest of their days, but for the opportunities arising out of war conditions. Up to Benjamin Franklin's time, there may never have been a good war. He would be wrong to say that the past war was a good one, but it is certain that there are many farmers' sons on the land the increase in farm ownership is probably one of the best. The most pleasing feature of this particular result is that the transfer of lands this large measure, become the owners of land in Canada.

It is stated that the population of the Province of Ontario is less at present than it was the year previous to the war, and the shortage of homes in the cities shows that the city population has increased. But, is this increase in the cities due to the influx of former farm owners? Many farms are changing hands this summer and this would seem to indicate that the original owners are giving up the life and those men are in great part moving to the cities, but the chief addition to the city population is doubtless due to the number of men who have left the farms in the hope of securing higher wages. That the farms are changing hands may not be a bad indication after all, if it does not as though they were abandoned. A Toronto law student, who spends most of his time in searching titles, said the other day that the greater number of the farms in one township of York county had been sold this year but the purchasers were business men who had had previous farm experience. Probably the new owners will be better able to entice labor to their farms than the former owners, their enthusiasm will perhaps, make up for any lack of experience. Offers to labor under, and a new broom sweeps clean "anyhow."

Co-operation among farmers has of late years taken away from the form of co-operation for production that existed in the early days, and has taken the form of co-operation for the marketing of produce. With the new movement started it was sorely needed, and even now, with prices at the high mark such as to allow any farmer a profit, the system is an advantage to both producer and consumer. What is more needed however for the benefit of all, is a return to the old-time practice of helping one's neighbor in the actual farm work. It is quite likely that the new farm-owners will pay more attention to this matter than did their predecessors.

Sunflower Ensilage.

In Alberta and in several of the Western States, experiments in the feeding of sunflower ensilage have given results that should prove favorably for this substitute for corn as material for helping to round out the winter ration for cattle. At the Montana Experimental Station a lot of milch cows was fed grain and clover hay, while another lot was fed grain, clover hay and sunflower ensilage. Both lots received the same amounts of grain, and the resulting milk yield was an average of 33.37 lbs. per day, per head, for those receiving grain and clover, while that of the lot receiving sunflower ensilage in addition was 34.35 lbs.

By substituting sunflower ensilage for a part of the clover fed in the above experiment, a saving of approximately 9 lbs. of clover hay per head per day was effected. An average daily allowance of 24 lbs. of the sunflower ensilage was fed to the individual cows during the high-producing lot. No objectionable flavor was noticed in the milk of the cows fed on sunflower ensilage.

RAPE AS FORAGE CROP

IT MAKES IDEAL PASTURES FOR SHEEP.

Nothing Equals This Feed for Ewes and Lambs During Nursing Period—It May Be Sown at Successive Intervals During the Year and Always Proves a Quick Grower.

Rape is the ideal forage crop for sheep. It not only lends itself admirably to intensive systems of sheep farming but it yields more and better green food to the acre and at less expense than any other crop in the long list of succulent summer foods. It tides the flock over the dry, hot season, when grasses are dead and fields brown, and it continues to grow and furnish luxuriant grazing late in the fall. It is extremely feasible to sow rape the fall passby fearing from the flock on to the succulent plots when the common pastures are exhausted or destroyed by early frosts. Nothing is better for the ewes and lambs during the nursing periods, and for weaning lambs it is incomparable for carrying them from mother-milk to self-sustaining lambhood with scarcely a sign of shrinkage. Rape is unexcelled as an autumn food for fattening mutton sheep and lambs on the profitable road to full prime.

The feeding value of the rape cannot be too highly exploited. It is not a feed of week or month, but may be sown at successive intervals so as to provide a continuous succession from early June until bleak December. One acre of rape feed in connection with a limited grain ration will produce as many pounds of mutton as two thousand five hundred pounds of corn and oil meal. Growing lambs and breeding ewes make greater gains in live weight on less supplemental grain feed when pastured on rape than similar lambs and ewes on clover pasture.

A field of rape and sufficient portable fencing to provide the flock with fresh grazing as the occasion demands will be of great value in maintaining the breeding ewes and conditioning the lambs into that desired quality and excellent condition so important on the market. The portable fences permit of frequently changing the ewes and lambs that are being conditioned to new areas of the rape fields as soon as the crop is consumed. When first turned in upon a field of rape sheep and lambs should become gradually accustomed to the change and allowed to have continued access to it, unless in time of storms, and, when once removed, care must be taken not to put them back upon it when hungry. If the sheep get a moderate amount of grain feed the morning before they are turned on the rape field the danger of bloat and other dangerous ailments is to a great extent lessened. Access to salt and to other kinds of pasture crops is desirable when the flock is pastured on rape. Two fields of rape are best upon the market; one is the summer; the other the winter annual, or biennial rape. The summer rape is not suitable for grazing, being grown commercially on a small scale as a food for birds. It yields in the neighborhood of 8,000 pounds of seed per acre, sown in rows twenty-eight inches apart with the drill. The seed is about eight cents per pound. As a rule, three or four pounds of Dwarf Essex seed per acre, sown in rows twenty-eight inches apart will give the best results. Rape thrives best when sown in cool and moist soil, yields always result on land that is well manured and fertilized and given thorough preparation before the seed is sown. If plants are thus well cultivated it will produce a maximum growth of forage.

Rape is a quick, rank grower. If the moisture conditions are favorable for the seed to germinate quickly the field will be fit for grazing in seven weeks from the time of sowing. On a cold, wet subsoil are unsuitable for rape. I find that the crop does best on an easy-working clay loam, well underdrained and rolled sufficiently to prevent standing water in case of excessive rainfall. Land intended for rape production should be well ploughed early and thoroughly prepared before seeding. Newly ploughed land never grows good rape, as the moisture evaporates too rapidly and the thorough tillage of the soil at this time materially checks weed growth and the heavy foliage of the rape shades the ground so that the weeds seldom grow and mature a seed crop the same year. Ordinary frosts and cold snaps will not materially affect the edibility of rape. The sheep may safely be pastured until cold weather comes, sometimes as late as December, in this place. Successive plantings should be made to stock the forage pastures sufficiently to utilize all of the forage possible until cold weather conditions prevent the flock from remaining outside.

Many corn belt farmers find it possible to fatten sheep and lambs on rape sown in corn fields at the last cultivation. A few years ago I visited a farm on which the owner sowed Dwarf Essex rape in a twenty-acre corn field and turned in a band of ewes that had passed their maternity duties. These ewes made good gains in weight with very little grain feed and returned a fine profit.

Tragedy of Barren Lands Revealed by Mounted Police.

As proof that there is no place, no matter how remote it be from civilization, where British law may be violated with impunity, an Eskimo who killed two of his fellows in the Barren Lands of the north, sits to-day in a cell at Dauphin, Man., awaiting trial for murder at the fall Assizes.

Sergt. W. D. Douglas, of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who walked and ran with a dog team more than 2,000 miles to arrest the native and take him to the nearest court, arrived in Winnipeg recently to report to police headquarters there.

Ouangwak, the Eskimo, shot his two victims because he wanted the wife of one of the men. Under the Eskimo code of morals, he could not have her so long as the husband was living, so Ouangwak had to kill him to attain his objective. The second man was slain as a matter of precaution, he was the nearest court, and Ouangwak surmised he would try to avenge the murder, so after killing the husband he killed the brother, who put up a fierce struggle before he was overcome

Marcus Carnrite, a well-known young farmer of Prince Edward County is dead as the result of shock from lightning stroke. Mr. Carnrite was milking a cow in the shed adjoining the barn on his farm at Alyea's hill, third concession of Ameliasburg as the storm was passing about 6.30 o'clock on Saturday evening. A bolt struck the building and killed the cow that Mr. Carnrite was milking and shocked Mr. Carnrite into insensibility. He partially recovered, however, but later weakened and died in about half an hour. The lightning set fire to the barn and that with the adjoining building and the season's crop were totally destroyed. Two of the cows were also killed by lightning.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Overton Redden took place from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Phillips, Yarker. The late Mrs. Redden had only returned to her home in North Bay a few days, when word was received announcing her death. The body arrived over the Canadian Northern railway Thursday, the funeral taking place on Friday to Harrowsmith cemetery. The late Mrs. Redden was the only daughter of Mrs. Charles Phillips, and was born in the township of Camden. She lived the greater part of her life in Yarker. Deceased leaves to mourn her loss, her husband, three sons and one daughter, Clifford, Bruce, Stace and Dorothy. Deceased was forty-seven years of age. Rev. Mr. Dickson officiated at the funeral.

Miss Martin, of Camden East, accompanied by her sister and niece, left Calgary on Monday last for Edmonton, from which city, after a short stay there, they will start for a trip through the Peace River District and by the Grand Trunk Pacific R. R. through the Yellow Head Pass to Jasper Park and north to Prince Rupert. At Prince Rupert they will take passage on one of the magnificent Grand Trunk steamships for a thousand mile sail down the Pacific, staying off on their return at Seattle and Victoria for a few days, before going to Vancouver. On their way back to Calgary they will take the Canadian Pacific R. R. route from Vancouver to Calgary in order to enjoy the grand scenery of the Rockies, through which this road runs, and also to permit them to make stops off at Lake Louise and Banff. Miss Martin also intends visiting the famous fruit growing Okanagan Valley before returning to Camden East.
